A SECOND YEAR DUE THE MAYOR

Mayor Bur's candidature is in keeping with the tradition that a chief magistrate of the city who has discharged the duties in a creditable manner should be returned for a second term. Though it has been frequently challenged, that tradition has become firmly established, and the electors have seldom failed to accord the honor of a second year to a mayor.

An opponent of a mayor who is running for a second term is necessarily under obligation to show that there are good reasons why this rule should be departed from. If there are such reasons, the party representatives on the council of Mr. Bur's chief opponent have not been able to define them during the year. That being the case, the more the mayor's opponents insist that such reasons exist, the more they will condemn the Labor aldermen for having failed to raise these issues when they were due to be raised.

The mayor of Edmonton occupies the position of an elected commissioner. It is not within reason to suppose that any man can take into the office that majority with civic affairs which is possessed by one who has spent a year in their administrative conduct. Experience gained during the year has invariably proved to be of service to a mayor during his second term. It is in recognition of that principle that the tradition of a second term has been established. There is every reason to suppose that in Mayor Bur's case the city will get a good term, and that the more efficient administration that was possible during his first year, or would be possible during the first year of one of his opponents.

SOME CIVIC ISSUES

There are signs that the municipal campaign will not be wanting in liveliness, and if organized effort does not fail of its purpose there will be a large turn-out of voters on Monday next. The alignment of the C. G. A. and the Labor party in more or less open hostility was perhaps inevitable. In any case it is so. And there is here the same old danger that the framers of consideration that is due to civic issues may be diverted by the enlivening incidents of a faction fight and by appeals to sectional interests or prejudices.

In the language of the late President Wilson, this is a good time for the private citizen to maintain his right to "think neutrally," to withdraw attention from the clash of battle and to fix it upon basic questions which have to do with the progress of the community. It is of a good deal less importance what candidates may be elected, and more that the campaign, and with what objects the affairs of Edmonton are to be conducted during the coming year.

Canada is prosperous. Central and northern Alberta are sharing in that prosperity to a marked degree. What better for Edmonton and Edmonton people get out of this year of events than to consider the extent upon the amount of effort that is put forth by next year's council to make use of the opportunity that is presented. If no such effort is made, while rival communities are making their move, then the progress of this city cannot expect to make the progress to which its situation entitles it.

Edmonton's streets are an eyesore to the stranger, a positive deterrent to the man who comes here with a view to locating or starting an industry. Edmonton's finances are sound and creditable, but the money better than at any time within the last four years. How far is Edmonton going to make use next year of the opportunity thus offered to put its streets in presentable condition and in condition to facilitate rather than hamper the carrying on of business. That is one question on which the voters should hear from every candidate for the city council.

And Edmonton needs at this juncture a "foreign" policy, positive in character and aggressive in tone, a policy aimed at bringing home to the other provinces the importance of the establishment of an independent foreign policy, by every means available the amount of pull that the city will be able to exert upon the trade of the enormous and remarkably prosperous territory of which it is the logical trade centre. What has the candidates to offer us means to coax into Edmonton the money which now goes out of Edmonton territory to distant multi-order houses?

"God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself."—2 Cor. 5:19.

Tomorrow's text will be selected by Rev. A. C. Bingham, of McDonald Baptist Church.

WHY ALL THE EXPLAINING?

Having tried for five years to explain to the people of Edmonton who it is they vote for under the proportional system, friend Journal has given it up as a bad job, and chartered a special writer to dispel the supposed darkness of the electorate the subject. That will do better than the Journal will be to suppose. He could hardly do worse.

The electors of Edmonton are not in need of any course of schooling on the merits and demerits of the proportional system. They have tried the ingenious contrivance, and very well, and have rejected it. They appreciated, without any help, whether they have secured the services of more experienced and capable business men in council than under the old system, and whether their taxes have been spent more wisely or less. They might be assumed at this stage to be in a position to vote, and the only issue with which they are so intimately acquainted, without being administered preparatory doses of theory,

Bud and his Mother

By EDGAR E. GUEST

"It's time," said Bud, "but I don't think of Ma as very much older than I."

And the light is as bright in her eyes.

That is my mother I'm certainly glad.

I don't think you for falling in love with her dad!

"Some women seem old," said the youngster to me.

"But I can't think of mother as old."

She was a young looking woman as a mother can be.

She's not very strong when I've been very bad, but I don't blame you for falling in love with her dad!

And I chuckled to hear that young racial discuss

his mother in terms of his age.

For it pleased me to see he was so pleased

And I promised to decide his wage.

And I told him he had better be prepared, I said,

he really indorses the choice of his dad.

And I chuckled to hear that young racial discuss

his mother in terms of his age.

For it pleased me to see he was so pleased

And I promised to decide his wage.

And I told him he had better be prepared, I said,

he really indorses the choice of his dad.

And I chuckled to hear that young racial discuss

his mother in terms of his age.

For it pleased me to see he was so pleased

And I promised to decide his wage.

MARKETS, GRAIN, STOCKS AND FINANCE

GRAIN SALES SOME HIGHER

WINNIPEG, Dec. 6.—A fair market was offered by strength of the Argentine market, but was very 5-6 cent higher than the Winnipeg grain exchange today.

With the market having made no net heavy, limited offerings gave the market sufficient buoyancy to hold up, but the session working within an extremely narrow range was inactive.

House and warehouse committees were again in the market for barley, while oats were worked over again by the dealers.

Prices remained fractionally.
